Decanters Galore and More!

Lavon Daugherty operates Collectors Decanters and Steins store and museum at 119 E. Main Street in Sugarcreek. The store features many decanters and steins and related collectible items, while the museum portion distillers produced decanters and are shown in the museum.

STORE, MUSEUM

A UNIQUE DESTINATION

Not every visit to Amish Country needs to consist only of Swiss cheese, mashed potatoes, or buggy rides. If you'd like your visit to include something nontraditional, Collectors Decanters and Steins Store and Museum at 119 E. Main St., Sugarcreek, could be the place for you.

The store is owned by Lavon Daugherty and features over 1,000 decanters in the store with another 1,000 steins for sale plus related collectible items. While the museum portion of the business is filled with over 3,000 decanters. Most of the decanters date from 1955 to 1992. After 1992 the decanters were no longer filled. Decanters were still made for collectors and collectors clubs but were shipped empty.

The store portion opened July of 2002 and has been going strong ever since. Three years later, in 2005, Daugherty opened the museum. He said the three year delay between the opening of the store and museum was due to the fact the room the museum is housed in took time to prepare. We needed to remodel the area and install glass display cases. The museum features unique decanters, many of which are from Lavon's personal collection. Some of the 80 distillers displayed may sound familiar to some of you, such as Ski Country, Jim Beam, Ezra Brooks, Hoffman, McCormick, and Wild Turkey to mention a few.

About 20 of the decanters on display in the museum have never been produced. You will be looking at the artist proof sold at auction at different times. The museum also features a non-service bar dating back to the 1930's. The bar was removed from the Flintstone Café in Barberton, Ohio.

A gift given to him in a brown paper bag launched Lavon's collection. Every Saturday, a group of us met for breakfast, one Saturday, a friend, Eleanor Taylor of Wooster, gave me a brown paper bag.

Brandy Snap Cannoli

1/2 c. butter, cubed
1/2 c. sugar
3 T. molasses
1 t. ground ginger
1/4 t. salt
1 c. all-purpose flour
2 T. brandy

FILLING:
1 1/2 c. ricotta cheese
3 T. grated orange peel
3 T. sugar, divided
1 1/2 c. miniature semisweet chocolate chips, divided
1 1/2 c. heavy whipping cream

In a small saucepan, combine the first five ingredients. Cook and stir over medium heat until butter is melted. Remove from the heat. Stir in flour and brandy; keep warm. Drop tablespoonfuls of batter onto a parchment paper-lined or well-greased baking sheet; spread each into a 4-in. circle. Bake at 350° for 5-6 min. or until edges begin to brown. Cool for about 1 min. or just until cookie starts to firm. Working quickly, loosen each cookie and curl around a metal cannoli tube to shape. Remove cookies from tubes; cool on wire racks. For filling, in a large bowl, combine the ricotta, orange peel and 1 tablespoon sugar; stir in 1/2 cup chocolate chips. In a small bowl, beat cream on
